Samaritan House reaches out to the community and helps educate residents about domestic violence and homelessness. Information and training promote awareness and keep such serious problems from happening in the first place, or prevent them from happening again.

Samaritan House makes education available to the community at large, other service providers, youth groups, faith institutions, schools and workplaces. Training is customized to the participant audience.

Programs include:

- Domestic violence and homelessness 101
- Teen Dating Violence
- Domestic violence in the workplace
- Survivor Testimonials

Please call for more information about advocacy, education and training, as well as information about workshops.
